A NEW BALLOT LAW.

Pennsylvania House Votes to Supersede the Australian System.

HARRISBURG, April 6 .- The house passed finally yesterday the Keator balot reform bill, which is designed to take the place of the so called Australian law under which the state is now operating. The bill was at first defeated, lacking two votes of the required number, but on a reconsideration it passed, with five votes to spare. The anti-Quay Repubicans and Democrats voted for it and had the assistance of a few regular Republicans.

The measure was drafted by the Pennsylvania Ballot Reform association. provides absolute secrecy in voting. Under the proposed law no voter shall have a helper unless he is physically incapable or unable to read. His helper must first declare under oath, subscribed to, that he will not attempt to influhelp he desires and that he will not disclose the contents of the ballot except in a legal proceeding. The bill does away with the circle, and the name of the candidate can be printed but once on the ballot for the Dr. same office. The bill reduces the ballot to one-sixth its present size and enables the voter to avoid risk of mistake in voting. of the commission It is not believed here that there will he any difficulty in arranging the details of the commission plan for the settlement of the Simoan trouble arising a new woman from reluctance on the part of the Brit-leh government to throw aside the Berlin treaty. The state department does not expect that it will be necessary to go far outside of the lines of that convention to secure a satisfactory adjustment of the present difficulties. As there appears to be an apprehension that the proposed commission may not be limited in its functions sufficiently to meet the British ideas, it may be said that the plan in contemplation safeguards all essential points. It is prothe islands, make a careful inquiry into existing conditions and then apply such remedial measures as may seem to be necessary to insure tranquillity.
